

This past year was filled with several work related trips, and because of the airports, airplanes, and hotel rooms, I was able to focus my efforts on professional study. This blog is an outgrowth of those efforts.

Even though I've created a "best of" list, I honestly enjoyed reading most of the books listed below. The titles listed in my top 5 are there because they had the greatest impact on my outlook on war, leadership, and professional development.

My Top 5 Books of 2013:

- 1.) War From the Ground Up: Twenty First Century Combat as Politics by Emile Simpson
- 2.) The Enlightened Soldier: Scharnhorst and the Militarische Gesellschaft in Berlin, 1801-1805 by Charles Edward White
- 3.) The Last Place on Earth: Scott and Amundsen's Race to the South Pole by Roland Huntford
- 4.) Military Adaptation in War: With Fear of Change by Williamson Murray
- 5.) On War by Carl von Clausewitz
